

Early Modern British and Irish History Seminar Lent Term 2013

The seminar meets on Wednesdays in the Graham Storey Room, Trinity Hall, at 5.15.

- | | |
|-------------|---|
| 30 January | Dr Adam Fox (University of Edinburgh)
The Making of the Scottish Chapbook, 1680-1760 |
| 6 February | Mr Gabriel Martindale (Peterhouse, Cambridge)
Latitudinarius Redivivus: or, The Pestilential Sect of Latitudinarians Rediscovered, with Annotations on Some of Our Recent Historiographers, and Animadversions upon etc. etc. |
| 13 February | Mr Will Ferguson (Trinity Hall, Cambridge)
The Politics of Religion in Scotland and Ireland, 1660-1685 |
| 20 February | Dr Stephen Brogan (Birkbeck London)
Medicine, Politics, and Sin: The Rationale of the Royal Touch During the Stuart Restoration, 1660-1688 |
| 27 February | Professor Andy Wood (University of East Anglia)
The Reformation and Popular Senses of Social Change in Early Modern England |

Seminars are followed at 6.45 by a drink in Trinity Hall bar, and at 7.15 by dinner in a local restaurant, to which all are welcome.

While the convenors take turns to chair the seminars, they are very happy to step aside if any member wishes to try their hand at chairing.

Seminars generally take the form of a 50-minute paper, either by senior visitors or by Cambridge PhD students, but sometimes take the form of informal surveys of historiographies, or of current collaborative projects, or an intellectual autobiography of a lifetime spent in early modern history.

Convenors: Mark Goldie, Clare Jackson, John Morrill, David Smith, Alex Walsham.